Swanswell enhances website accessibility with BrowseAloud

A leading provider of drug and alcohol services has joined BrowseAloud, making their advice and information easier to access for people with literacy or sight difficulties.

Swanswell have over 40 years experience helping people change their lives for the better. They have added BrowseAloud to their website as part of their ongoing commitment to reaching more people who need their services.

Visitors to Swanswell's website will be able to hear web content read aloud, improving accessibility for people with visual impairments, literacy difficulties, dyslexia or where English is not their native language.

Debbie Bannigan, Swanswell's Chief Executive comments, "It can be hard for people who may struggle reading the written word to find the services they need. By adding BrowseAloud to our website we can give people information about our services in a way that they can understand".

Visit Swanswell's website at www.swanswell.org or call 01788 559 400 for more information about Swanswell.
